The article, by Joan Rubin, titled "Report on Meetings", expresses the opinions of the author herself, and not necessarily that of the Paper. In this time of crisis, everyone's mind runs in Editorials; objectivity is rare. The Paper recognizes its responsibility to print all opinions submitted to it. It is with this obligation in mind that we printed Mrs. Rubins article. If Mr. Movitz is disturbed by the content of Mrs. Rubin's article, we invite him to reply to it in print, in the Paper.

The objections voiced by Mr. Movitz at the meeting to Joan Rubins article were:

L. That, concerning his objection to tape recording the proceedings, his purpose was the protection of the students present who may be inhibited from voicing umpopular opinions

2. That when he proposed that "formal classes be suspended for the remainder of the year" the students, who constituted a majority, could have voted it in if they wanted to.

3. That the statement: "no strike action be recognized by members of the administration or faculty" was not expressed a s a policy.

4. That the meeting did not recognize the strike because the strike statement was withdrawn by the students, having not themselves voted to accept it.

Further ovjections to the article were that it was incomplete, p people were quoted out of context, that it was slanted to discredit the faculty, representing only the reporters point of view, and finally , that it does not indicate the number of student participants nor the ~~extent~~ of their participation in arriving at the motions.

This morning at 10:00 A.M. the students voted on the Main motions passed at the meeting of faculty, students and administration. During the meeting the question of a quorum was brought up. However, it is not necessary at an open meeting and it was voted by the people present at the meeting to hold ~~elections.~~the vote. The results were as follows:

Y	N	A
164	42	4	1. Reaffirm the administration's policy regarding classes which is: the college is open and classes w will be held at the individual descretion of the faculty and strdents for the balance of the academic year.
